

Abstract

The most important feature of any language is that of mutual influence among them. Language may affect one another. Each language takes a second. With the help of time and space factors, the languages overlap. Thus, the cultures between the peoples converge. We see that the linguistic effect exists after a period of time. This is what happened in the subject of our research, which influenced the Aramaic language in the Arabic and Persian languages. This linguistic influence became the subject of research which is necessary to determine the factors of influence and its points, thus adding another addition to comparative linguistic research studies.
